Abstract: The paper seeks to present the main methods for ethical decisions, mainly Hare's utilitarian method, the ethical matrix and so on. An ethical decision is often thought of as the one that reduces future conflict. In sociology and political science, practical and applied ethics itself is often defined as a process of de-escalating moral conflicts to the point of: non-violent resolution, reducing harm and educating as required so that each participant can effectively see the other's point of view.

Keywords: ethical decision, methods, cases, ethical matrix, ethical dilemmas.
