Abstract: Skills training and development is a process conducted throughout the career and involves specialized training conducted both within the organization and across the professional and social environment. The concept of expertise, in cognitive psychology and educational sciences, in ergonomics and economy or in human resource management is inherent to individual and collective performance, which all of us desire to train in the art of leadership and it is very important since it better highlights the leader's personality, and his personal example has a key role in achieving the objectives set for the unit. The art of leadership is actually the art of working with people that is a new, modern and distinct dimension of the leader.
