Abstract: In any economy, the labour market depends on the correlation of the initial education and vocational training offers with the labour market demands. Recently, it has been discovered that in the Romanian market there is a gap between the labour market and the education system. Therefore, the education policy should be redesigned, taking into account the changes in the economic and social environment, in order to have a correlation between the requirements of the labour market trends and the types of training provided by the education system. The aim of the paper is to study the need for skilled workforce in Bistrița Municipality by comparing vacancies with the specialisation offered by the theoretical high schools in Bistrița.
